Adirondack fly fishing adventures?

You can bet your bass on it!

Now beginning his 34th professional season, Joe Hackett has earned a living as an Adirondack guide, introducing guests to a variety of Adirondack adventures. Over the years he has developed a following among anglers who appreciate traveling to remote waters where they can cast in solitude to fight wild fish at the end of a flyrod. Joe has a weekly outdoor column in over a dozen North Country newspapers and regularly contributes to both regional and national publications. While he knows the finer points of canoeing, fly fishing, playing and living in the wilderness, his greatest pleasure is enjoying the time spent with his wife, Maria, and their two daughters.
